

Eleonora Dallagiacoma

KEY-WORDS:

Epistemology – Nature Restoration Law – Europe - Ecosystem restoration

PROJECT TITLE

Foundations of Law in European Regulatory Processes: An Epistemic-Linguistic Analysis of the EU Nature Restoration Law

Research Objectives

The research project aims to critically and hermeneutically reconstruct the international legislative process, between epistemology, law, and policy, that led to the drafting and subsequent approval by the European Parliament of the Nature Restoration Law and its related annexes.

Research Contribution and Impacts

The desired contribution is threefold. Firstly, through an in-depth exploration of the themes and concepts outlined in the above research questions, it aims to make a significant contribution to the reference literature, particularly related to understanding the complex links between science, society, and policymakers in light of the processes defining environmental legislation and ecosystem restoration within the European context. Secondly, this analysis aims to provide understanding and critical reading tools useful to the actors involved. Lastly, it aims to highlight the potential benefit arising from active citizen involvement in legislative- decision processes related to grand societal challenges

Why should you care?

Ecosystems support all life on Earth. The healthier our ecosystems are, the healthier the planet - and its people. Among the different types of ecosystems highlighted by the United Nations Environment Programme and the Food and Agriculture Organisation of the United Nations, farmlands play a central role.

The European Union wishes to underline its leading role in addressing the current challenges of ecosystem restoration. The level of complexity is high and within this systemic complexity the roles of science, policy and citizenship are intertwined. A thorough analysis of these dynamics may prove to be a valuable key to best address other current and future scenarios.

PROFILE

I am a first-year PhD student
In Legal Sciences

AFFILIATION

Department of Legal Sciences
Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore

LANGUAGES

Mother language

Level B2

Level B2

HOW TO REACH ME

Email Address:

eleonora.dallagiacoma@unicatt.it

Reference Contact

Prof. Marco Allena